

If you feel like you have no one who empathizes with your struggles, consider finding a support group. You'll find people who not only understand what you're facing but are willing to share your struggles.